Summary of reasons for decision:

The text file contains instructions for the construction of an explosive substance. Although the resulting mixture is a restricted substance, and possession or use of it would be an offense under New Zealand law the likelihood of successfully creating the explosive mixture from these instructions is very low. Therefore the publication cannot seriously be considered promotional or encouraging of crime. However, the unrestricted availability of the publication is still likely to be injurious to the public good. Children and young people, who are in the process of developing their cognitive abilities, are at risk of following the instructions without taking adequate precautions, or fully understanding the consequences of doing so, given the innocuous nature of the components. Adults, on the other hand, are likely to have the maturity and experience to understand the warnings, and appreciate the physical risks and potential legal ramifications of following the instructions contained in the publications. They are likely to exhibit appropriate caution and take steps to mitigate any potential harm. Therefore, these text file is restricted to those aged 18 and over, as this is a justified limitation on the right to freedom of expression contained in the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990 in order to prevent injury to the public good.
